

I am concerned about the LPFM expansions that allow LPFM to take priority over existing FM translator service. K-LOVE radio is an immensely valuable radio network with numerous translators that could be negatively affected by this change. K-LOVE provides family friendly programming that could be usurped by programming with less of a family emphasis simply because of the precedence provided to the LPFM providers. This would be a mistake, as K-LOVE provides a message that is more than just radio; the network changes peoples lives and as a result, reduces the potential for crime and other social ills.

Any LPFM translator can put up Howard Stern and titillate the rapists in our society, who will then go out and propagate their sickness. K-LOVE, by contrast, helps people turn their lives around. Therefore, for the good of our society, radio networks like K-LOVE must remain a priority for the FCC.
